KING HAAKON ASSUMES SCEPTRE

THEIR MAJESTIES OF NORWAY CORONATION SERVICE IN ANCIENT NORSE CATHEDRAL.

TRONDHJEM, June 21.—With a ceremonial modified from the old Norse forms to meet the modern democratic spirit of the country, King Haakon VII and Queen Maud at noon tomorrow, in the old Trondhjem cathedral, will be anointed, blessed and given crowns. When nearly forty years ago, King Oscar of Sweden received the crown, he bared his breast and ecclesiastics crossed it with the sacred oils, according to the custom of older days. King Haakon will be anointed only in the forehead and wrists and the entire rite will be simpler. King Haakon and Queen Maud dined privately tonight with the Prince and Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria Alexandra.

According to the programme for the coronation ceremonies the King and Queen will leave the "Stiftsgaard," the residence of the provincial governor, for the cathedral at 11 o'clock. Their majesties will be accompanied by members of the court and the staff in attendance. All the church bells will begin ringing and continue until their majesties have arrived at the cathedral. At the pavilion before the cathedral their majesties will be received by the Bishop of Trondhjem, accompanied by the Bishops of Christiania and Bergen and the clergy present. The Bishop of Trondhjem will meet their majesties with the words "God bless your coming and going out from now to all eternity."

THE ORDER OF PROCESSION.

To the sound of music the procession will enter the cathedral in this order: 1, clergy; 2, bishops; 3, coronation committee of the states; 4, the gentlemen who are to act during the coronation; 5, supreme adjutants and adjutants of the King; 6, the King's private secretary, the secretary of the royal household; 7, the chief of the royal household and high steward and their majesties, the King and Queen; 8, the banner of the kingdom, carried by the admiral and general in command; 9, first lady of honor to the Queen; 10, ladies in attendance on the Queen.

The Bishop of Trondhjem will recite the first line after which the congregation and choir and orchestra will sing the first verse of this hymn. The Bishop of Bergen will recite the first two lines of the Te Deum, the first six verses of which will be sung by the congregation and choir accompanied by the organ and orchestra. The Bishop of Christiania then will deliver a sermon on Joel II 21, after which a hymn will be sung by a priest and choir. When the first part of the cantata has been performed, the King will standing on the platform before the altar. The chief of the royal household will precede his majesty and preside at the left of the throne. After the King, the general in command will carry the banner of the kingdom and hold it at the right behind the throne. The supreme adjutants of his majesty will accompany his majesty up to the throne. The Bishop of Trondhjem will take the appointment horn and anoint the King on the forehead and wrists, saying: "May the almighty God anoint you with his spirit and grace and give unto you to reign with wisdom, power and glory that the name of God may be hallowed, right and truth may be confined to the benefit and happiness of the people and land."

The King having arisen and placed himself on the throne, the Prime Minister McChelsen will proceed to the altar and take the royal crown, which he conjointly with the Bishop of Trondhjem will place on the head of the King while the bishop will say "Lord of Lords and King of Kings, who has given you the crown of the kingdom, may He uphold and strengthen you in all royal and Christian virtues to the glory of His name, and blessing of the Norwegian people. May His grace in this corruptible life prepare you for the inheritance of the righteous, incorruptible crown in heaven." The minister of foreign affairs, Loevald, then will proceed to the altar, taking the orb, which he, conjointly with the Bishop of Trondhjem, will present to the King who then takes the sceptre in his left and receives the orb with his right hand, the bishop saying "May God who has made thee King of the Norwegian kingdom, grant that the country under thy guidance may flourish in peace, power and prosperity, in praise and exaltation of Him, you to you and benefit and blessing for the people." The minister of war, Olsen, then will proceed to the altar where he will take the sword and jointly with the Bishop of Trondhjem deliver it uncovered to the King, who then will give the orb back to him, the bishop saying: "God choose thee for His servant and deliver the sword unto thee, to reward the good, punish the wicked, protect the honor and happiness of Norway. May this word be blessed in thy hand to the protection of the country." A salute of 72 guns will then be given from the artillery and warships. The Bishop of Trondhjem will then proceed to the altar. The King taking his sceptre in his right and the orb in his left hand, then follows the second part of the cantata. When this is performed the verses of a hymn will be sung, the two first lines of the first verse being recited by the Bishop of Bergen.

THE DIVINE BLESSING INVOKED.

The Bishop of Trondhjem will then say: "Eternal, Almighty God, Father in Heaven, Thou who rules all the kingdoms of earth, and holdest the heart of kings in Thy hand, praised be Thou for Thy mercy. Thou who hast given us a right and high-minded monarch and crown him with Thy gifts. Thy word of truth under his sceptre shines upon the country and finds believing and obedient hearts, that peace and blessing be unto him for time and eternity. Make his throne firm, lengthen his days, bless his house until remote generations and let the country flourish in plenty and faithfulness in honor and prosperity, in peace and unity. Hear us, Father, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen!" The bishop will give the benediction, there will be music from the organ and the King will return to his home, preceded by the chief of the royal household. After him the sword, uncovered and upright, will be carried at the left and the banner at the right.

His Majesty wears the royal mantle, the crown on his head, the sceptre in the right and orb in the left. The King having taken his seat, the third part of the cantata will be performed. This being ended, the Queen will proceed to the throne, where her coronation will take place with ceremonies similar to those with which the King was crowned. Their Majesties will then drive back to the residence of the provincial governor.
